CORRESPONDENCE

(We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of correspondents. Their columns are open to every shade of opinion or party preference. Correspondence must not be libelous or indecent and must be accompanied by the name of the writer not necessarily for publication but as a guarantee of good faith.)

ED. THE INDEPENDENT:

Time says: "Coming events cast their shadows before." And was there not a shadow of truth awhile ago in the street talk, that L. A. Thurston had expressed himself that Kailua would be placed upon the throne of Hawaii? What object had the Cabinet and even S. E. Bishop, to work tooth and nail to pension Kailua, if it was not for the purpose of placing themselves on the right side of the fence when the time is ripe for action? Gentlemen, there is no use in mincing matters and playing the hypocrite any longer. We believe the Minister of Finance has only partly raised the curtain and shown the public the financial state of this country; but what he has shown is bad enough to call a halt and perform the sensible, that will satisfy the people as a whole, before we tumble headlong, bag and baggage overboard. Now then, "what are you going to do about it," when the demands for heavy damages are made against this government by America and England for promiscuous imprisonment of their citizens; which will take place as sure as the sun rises and sets in Africa. Something whispers to us, that when the play begins, the last act will end in placing justice where it rightly belongs.

PATIENCE

Annoying Repetitions.

Many people have an annoying habit of interlarding their conversation with some pet expression which at last becomes intensely tiresome to the hearer. A fond wife of my acquaintance cannot make the simplest statement without applying to her husband for the corroboration. "We had a splendid time at the seaside—didn't we, Harry? I never felt so exhilarated in my life—did I, Harry? The view surpassed anything I ever saw—didn't it, Harry?" and so on and on, until the listener finds himself waiting with nervous impatience for the next stock phrase.

A young girl, who was accustomed to conclude all her stories with the word, "Wasn't it funny?" was telling her mother of the sorrow which had come to a friend. "Just think," she began. "I asked Annie Platt this morning if she knew why Mary Wallis wore black; and she said that Mary was out in a boat with her mother and two brothers last summer, and a squall came up, and the boat capsized, and they were all drowned, except Mary. Wasn't it funny?"

"I shouldn't consider it a subject for mirth," said her mother, firmly, and then the girl, who was really full of sympathy for her new friend, realized what she had said, and that such unintentional expressions are apt to fit badly into the subject under discussion.

Anton Rubinstein, the Russian composer, in his autobiography, tells of the confusion which overcame a certain architect of his acquaintance who had a habit of repeating the words, "You understand." On one occasion he was explaining certain architectural matters to the Emperor, and, according to custom, made free use of his favorite expression.

"Good Heavens!" exclaimed Emperor Nicholas, at last, irritably, "of course I understand. My dear fellow, how could I help it?"
